

Arts Integration Residency and Professional Development Programs Available to Participating Educational Leaders as Scholars Districts and Schools

The Foundation for Educational Administration (FEA) and Young Audiences New Jersey & Eastern Pennsylvania (YA) are offering an exciting opportunity for districts and schools that are participating in the Educational Leaders as Scholars program. With generous funding from the Geraldine R. Dodge Foundation, participating districts/schools can apply for an arts integration residency and professional development program of 5 or more days with a YA teaching artist. Teaching artists will work with your district/school's Creative Leadership Team to design effective arts integrated practices or strategies that can be used in professional learning opportunities or in the classroom.

Districts/schools may apply with a brief application outlining their current arts integration work and their vision for their school in the upcoming year. Applications are due Oct. 28, 2016.

An application and instructions for applying can be found at yanjep.org/ed-leaders-FEA-grant.
